

Planning for Character Development

The mental health of young people is a growing concern amongst professionals and parents. Yet the continual pressure to raise standards in schools shows no signs of alleviating. Pace of life, increased competition for jobs, social media and political uncertainty are all contributing to a culture where the need for a strong character is essential. We would like to invite you to a one-day conference where we will explore how schools can develop character through the curriculum and at the same time link this with better pupil progress. Examples of how some of the most successful schools are doing this will be shared and opportunities provided to reflect on what you might do in your school.

The course will be presented by Nick Hind; one of the countries leading educational thinkers and motivational speakers. (www.nickhind.co.uk)

Course aims and outcomes:

- To understand what the development of character means and the issues raised in developing it in schools
- To explore the freedoms that schools have to develop character in young people and ways that this has already been done in schools in this country and internationally. What works and what doesn't
- To reflect on different models of planning that support teachers and help raise standards through developing character
- To consider the implications for developing character in delegates own schools
- To have fun, laugh and be inspired

Venue and costs:

The conference will be held at the Three Counties Hotel in Hereford on 28th February 2017. We will start at 0845hrs with a welcome cup of coffee, and finish at 1600hrs. Extra time is available after the event for personal reflection time with Nick.

The cost is £175.00 per delegate. A reduction of £25.00 per person will be made for schools wishing to send more than one delegate. All prices are exclusive of VAT. The cost of the conference is inclusive of lunch and all refreshments.

Booking:

To reserve a place on this course, please contact Rachel Hill, our operations manager.

Tel. 07988 951285

Email: Rachel@nickhind.co.uk

We look forward to working with you.